Join the Seymour Products Trivia Challenge! Find the hidden trivia question and be the third person to send in the correct answer for a free feature ad in next week's issue of the Business Marketing Bulletin. Send your answer to terri@seymourproducts.com?subject=answer

Congratulations to Michael Cushman for being the winner of last week's trivia challenge! Good luck to everyone this week!

Last week's Q: Who was the first president to make Thanksgiving a national holiday?

Last week's A: There were actually two correct answers since my question could have been misunderstood. Abraham Lincoln (the answer I was looking for) proclaimed it a holiday but Roosevelt made it official! So either answer was acceptable.

Join in the fun and try to win a free feature ad. Good luck all!

If you know anyone who could benefit from this ezine, please feel free to forward them a copy in its entirety. Thank you.

If you would like to advertise in the BMB, please visit:

*You seem to have it all together. I love your website. It seems so genuine. I have been scammed so many times that I hesitate to take the first step.
* Sandy*

I have been scammed several times as well and I know exactly how a lot of people feel about starting an online business with an unknown person/company. Altogether, I must have tried a dozen things before finding ebooks. Some of them were scams and some were not, but they just didn't make money.

If you are thinking about starting your own online business, I would be glad to answer any questions I can about the truth of internet marketing. ;-)

3 Easy Guidelines to Expose Your Blog by Stacey Zimmerman

Blogging is the front line of the worldwide web nowadays, different kind of blogger pops in the internet with their own purpose, some want to entertain, some want to express their selves and some want to earn big bucks. The content of your blog matters most, but what will happen to your blog if the readers themselves don't know someone as good as you exist. That's why blogging tips of all sorts are floating in the blogosphere. Also tips for general and specific improvement of blogging.

Involve yourself on writing projects

There are numerous sites in the world wide web that operate writing project. I think that you should submit a post to every writing project you joined. Naturally when the project is complete, this will generate numerous of back links by web surfers that are picking their favorite contributions. You will also acquire a small number of extra links from people that make a post with every post contributed to the writing project.

Don't forget to leave valuable comments on other websites and blogs

One of the popular and best ways of making people to find your blog easily is to join in some discussions on other blogs within your niche. Make sure to leave a good and remarkable comment for this will make the readers and authors realized that you are good and professional. Tracking up and following comments can also make a good impression of yours.

You can link to people when they do good work or send them some track-backs

This is also a good tool to help people find your blog. This can come in a couple of ways:

- Many bloggers choose to do it on a more private and consecrate way, individual post to highlight the work of another blogger within their niche. Through this you will get the chance of a better indexed and a better search engine ranking, it also let the users to comment on your personal posts and brought up a discussion.
- The second method that is used by blogger, is to make up a post partnered with several links that go all over the place, such as "Daily Links" or "Weekly Links". In this way it is not so personal, and will not index well with search engines because the keywords is somewhat disorganized. This will also result to a small number of users to comment due to lack of focused in the subject. This method will need a lot of work and allow you to spread and share more links.

These are the two methods, it depends on you what will you use, but no matter what you choose, make sure that your blog does not become an echo chamber. You can contribute to each link in your post through adding some of your thoughts and opinions to the link. If your post is ready to publish you can send a track-back to each post that you link to. Then if you are linking to a smaller blog, the author may notice and try to see your website.

Oppositely, if it is a larger blog, the author may not notice it, consequently those sites will display track-backs and you will often get clicks from their readers who want to see others reactions to the post.

These tips are formulated specially for bloggers so that their website will be easily found by web surfers. But always keep in mind, even though you are good in inviting people to your blog, the content should not be forgotten thus prioritize it. You should write first a good article before inviting them to your website. And, if you are really self-assured with your blog, these are some highly efficient choices that are not free, such as advertising with Google Ad-words, Text Link Ads, or running a contest on your blog that comes with prizes.
